

Making Homes Happen in Native Nations

This session will discuss the regional and federal resources available to Native Nations for investment in both affordable housing projects, and renewable energy. Technical assistance is available to help with grant writing, capacity building, and more regarding increasing affordable housing and reducing costs of renewable energy on Tribal lands.

Thursday, March 28, 2024 — 10:00 - 11:30 a.m.

The event is free, but registration is required.

Please register for the Zoom meeting or use the QR Code.

Federal money available for tribes to invest in renewable energy and housing

Jason Lowry, Director of Sustainability Initiatives with Local First AZ

Jason Lowry received his master's in Sustainable Communities from Northern Arizona University. After graduation, he worked as a community organizer for nine years in Texas and Arizona. Since joining Local First Arizona in 2022 as the Director of Sustainability Initiatives, Jason has worked to increase the reach and impact of Local First Arizona's statewide sustainability programs — the Green Business Boot Camp, Green Business Certification, and Green Lending Products, which support businesses and rural communities to save money by adopting sustainable practices.

Supporting local and tribal governments with customized financial and technical assistance

Amy St. Peter, Deputy Executive Director, Maricopa Association of Governments

Amy St. Peter is the Deputy Executive Director of MAG; she coordinates diverse priorities and perspectives in the development of solutions that strengthen the vitality in one of the fastest growing areas in the country. Ms. St. Peter earned a Master of Public Administration degree from Arizona State University in 2004 and graduated cum laude with a Bachelor degree in Sociology and Writing from Loyola College in 1994. She has an extensive background in human services.

This work is in partnership with the Arizona Community Foundation and Local First AZ.

ARIZONA
COMMUNITY
FOUNDATION

